A School for Dogs in Germany Where the Animals Are Trained to Be of Value in the Military Service-Their Great Intelligence. The great value of well trained dogs in the military service has of late years been so entirely proved that various war offices not only recognize but encourage their training. The Germans were the first to begin a regular organized plan of dog training, and a few years ago they established the first school for dogs at Gosler. The pupils there turned out so well that many other garrisons followed suit, and the whole dog service was placed under the supervision of the general commanding the army corps. In the following year Gen. Von der Goltz, after inspecting the trained dogs, reported in the highest terms on the unarring fidelity with which they worked and delivered dispatches in the face of any obstacle which could be laid in their

The Story of Two Foxes.

There is an old story of two foxes who vere so lovingly attached to each other that they could not quarrel. One day, however, they decided that life would be less monotonous if they could only have a difference, so they resolved to dispute about a piece of mest.

"I want that," cried one "Very well, dear fox," said the other, meekly, "take it."

"On, no, dear fox," said the first one. penitently. "I wouldn't take it away from Thereupon they concluded that quarrel-

"What's the matter?" called Dick, finding Dora sulking in a corner.
"Nothing!" was the dignified answer "Oh, come now, I know there is. Was it because I was playing with Tom Rogers?"

"No, it wasn't that," owned Dora, her eyes filling with angry tears; "but you seedn't have told me not to touch your Proper Use of the Word Taste.

Discriminate in the use of taste. When taste is used transitively it should not be followed by of. Don't say, 'taste of the meat," "taste of the preserves;" omit of. The same rule applies to smell. The in-transitive verbs taste and smell are often followed by of, as, "the bread tastes of fish;" it "amells of crossote."

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

A Collection of Fugitive Facts and Outof-the-Ordinary Information. As is the case in regard to many other things, it is claimed that we owe the invention of visiting cards to the Chinese. So long ago as the period of the Tong dynasty (818-907) visiting cards were known to be in use in China, and rings is also the date of the introduction of the "red silken cords" which figure so conspicuously on the engagement cards of that country. When a Chinaman desires to marry his parents intimate that fact to a professional "match maker," who thereupon runs through a list of her visiting acquaintances and selects one whom she considers a fitting bride for the young man, and then she calls upon the young woman's parents, armed with the bridegroom's card, on which are inscribed his ancestral name and the eight symbols which denote the day of his birth. If the answer is an acceptance of his suit the bride's card is sent in return, and should the oracles prophesy good concerning the union the particulars of the engagement are written on two large cards tied together with the red cords.

A Walk Around Europe.

Two enthusiastic pedestrians, both Lon doners, according to The Pall Mail Budget, recently completed the remarkable per-formance of journsying around Europe on foot—a task upon which they were engaged close upon twelve months. They left London, journeying on foot to Dover, where they crossed the channel to Calnis. This, with the exception of crossing the Baltic, was the only eccasion on which they performed any portion of their journey otherwise than on foot. They did not touch Paris, but proceeded from Calais to Abbeville and Dieppe, and then on, skirting the coast line as far as Brest, Nantes and Bor-

Hence they proceeded through the prov inces of the Lower Charente across the Pyrences into Spain, going into Portugal as far south as Liston and Oporto, and then right across country to Madrid and Barcelone, Skirring the Mediterranean, they reached Triests and Venice, and then getting into Austria they went on to Cracow, and across Russian Poland to Moscow and St. Petersburg. From the Russian capital they went to Riga, where they crossed the Baltic to Norway and Sweden, returning through Gormany and Holland to Belgium, and then on to Ostend and across the channel again to Dover, reaching London none the worse for their exceptionally long walk.

First Method of Producing Electricity. If a piece of amber or resin and a piece of glass be rubbed together and then sep-arated they are no longer indifferent to each other as before, but each attracts the other. In this condition the bodies are both said to be electrified or charged with electricity. Evidence of this condition is easily secured by suspending one of the charged bodies, so that it can move freely, and then presenting the other. An electric charge may be communicated to bodies which have not been rubbed on merely bringing them in contact with one which is already electrified. For example, a light ball of pith suspended by a silken thread will be charged by such contact, and it can then serve as an electroscope; that is, it can be employed as a means of detecting the electric condition of any body to which it may be presented. The intagio of the ring contains the coat of arms of Great Britain and the monogram of the king. After his decapitation thoring was inherited by his dethrened son, who during his exile in France was reduced to such straits that he was forced to part with it. The well known French traveler Tavernier ought it, and in his subsequent journey to the Orient he showed it to the shah of Persia, who paid him a fabulous sum for it. The ring has since then been jealously guarded in the Persian treasury vault. Orange Blossoms and Brides.

Saracen brides were the first to wear orange blossoms, and occasionally the same emblem has been worn by European brides ever since the time of the Crusades; but the general adoption of wreaths of orange blossoms for brides is comparatively a modern practice, according to The Dry Goods Chronicle, due especially to the recent taste for flower language. The subject of bridsl decorations being made a study, and the orange flower being found suitable, from the use made of it by the ancient Saracens, it was introduced by modistes as a fit ornament for brides. The notion once planted soon became a custom, now very general, adopted by all brides who study the conventions of society and follow the accepted fashions. Rosa Bonheur. Terrible Blood Poison. STANLEY'S GREAT BOOK!

Suffered all a Man Could Suffer and Live. Body Covered with Awful Sores. Cured by Cuticura I contracted a terrible blood-poisoning a year ago. I doctored with two good physicians, neither of whom did me any good. I suffered all a man can unfer and live. Hearing of your CUTICULA REMEDIES, I concluded to try them, knowing if they did me no good they could make me no worse. I have been using them about ten weeks, and aim most happy to say that I aim almost rid of the awful sores that covered my face and body. My face was as bad, if not worse, than that of Miss Bourton, spoken of in. Invention of the Compass.

The valuable invention of the compass is involved in mystery and its real discoverer is unknown. Lafiteen, in his history of the Portaguess discovery in the new world, says that Vasco da Gama brought it to Lisbon from the coast of Africa on his return from Melinda, where the Arabs then used it, and he believed the Portaguese to have been until then ignorant of it. Some attribute it to Flavin (soils, of Amaiphi, about the year 1302, while others again are of opinion that the invention is due to the Cuipose, and that one of the compass.
